When you see articles that have PDF Full Text or HTML Full Text, those links are to articles in the EBSCO databases and will always retrieve full text for you. (Click here for directions in using EBSCO databases.)

When you see Full Text Finder, you may or may not find the full text for an article title.

When you do use Full Text Finder, it retrieves articles from many different sources. They are from different vendors who each provide access to their articles in a unique fashion.

Unfortunately, there is no way to predict which vendor is providing access, so there is no uniform set of instructions for accessing Full Text Finder articles. You will have to read carefully and follow the directions when accessing Full Text Finder articles.

Here are some sample searches to show you what can happen when you click on two different Full Text Finder links.

The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying the Electronic Journal Center website. The URL in the address bar is https://journals.ohiolink.edu/pg_200?::NO:200:P200_ARTICLEID:348822113. The page title is "The Silicon Valley Ethos: Tech Industry Products, Discourses, and Practices". The authors listed are Marina Levina; Amy Adele Hasinoff; Marina Levina; Amy Adele Hasinoff (author info). The source is "Television & New Media", Vol. 18, Iss. 6, September 2017, pp. 489-495. The abstract discusses the ethos of Silicon Valley and its impact on technology, labor, and society. The keywords are "Silicon Valley; technology; Internet; information; critical media studies; new media". The DOI is 10.1177/1527476416680454. The publisher is Sage Publications. The author info section identifies Amy Adele Hasinoff as being from the University of Colorado Denver, CO, USA. The PlumX Metrics logo is visible in the top right corner of the article content area.

You have to look around a little, but the link to the article is on the upper left.

It differs greatly from the first example - there is no standard set of instructions that will work every time...

If you clicked on the PlumX Metrics (that cute little thing with the five arms!) - it tracks the statistics about how much this article is being used – no links to the article are available. So avoid this if you want the full-text.

EGCC does not subscribe to everything that is available in OhioLINK. The EGCC library has access to what constitutes a typical undergraduate collection. Its databases are of broad and general interest, many of which contain technical information. It does not subscribe to specialized databases of interest to graduate students.
